"The Internet Is Not the Answer is the most compelling, persuasive, and passionately negative thing I've yet read on this topic. It offers a scary picture of how the ultra-libertarian superstars of Silicon Valley are leading us inexorably into a future with the sort of social inequalities not seen in the West since the early days of the Industrial Revolution." —Kazuo Ishiguro, New Statesman (Books of the Year)

The internet is not a physical space, it's a filtered reality. This truth is best illustrated by my favorite quote from our 5th President, Abraham Lincoln. "Don't believe everything you read on the internet." Lincoln's words remind us that the internet is full of bull, some subtle and some not subtle.
