The systems view of life is "a change from seeing the world as a machine to understanding it as a network" (p.4). Greek philosophy, in the sixth century BC, "understood the order of the cosmos to be that of a living organism" (p.5).

The Systems View of Life (A Unifying Vision): Capra ...

The Systems View of Life: A Unifying Vision by Fritjof Capra and Pier Luigi Luisi is an interdisciplinary book which presents "a unified systemic vision that includes and integrates life's" different dimensions (p.xii). All living systems are "highly nonlinear" networks where there are "countless interconnections" (p.xii).

The Systems View of Life: A Unifying Vision by Fritjof Capra

The Systems View of Life: A Unified Vision is an attempt to integrate life's biological, cognitive, and social dimensions in a unified systems view of life. In a way, I think Capra and Luisi are brave in taking such a broad sweep across so many different areas.

The concept of systems thinking refers to a mode of understanding phenomena and processes in the context of the interdependent connections. We can use systems thinking to understand how a present situation emerged from a constellation of other situations, which were themselves contingent on their relationship to other situations, and so on. A situation here refers to any process, object, or system manifest in reality.

The Systems View of Life

Fritjof has described The Systems View of Life as "the realisation of a dream" and it has been written with his friend and long-time collaborator Pier Luigi Luisi who is one of the world's leading authorities on the origin of life and self-organisation of synthetic and natural systems. The result is a text-book which presents, for the first time, a coherent systemic framework which integrates four dimensions of life " biological, cognitive, social and ecological.

Fritjof Capra

A systems view of life treats environmental fluxes and biological fluxes together as a "reciprocity of influence," and a reciprocal relation with environment is arguably as important for understanding life as it is for understanding ecosystems. As Harold J. Morowitz (1992) ...

Life - Wikipedia

The systems view is all about connections and relationships, and it's about seeing the world as a living network, and not as a machine. This fundamental shift in perspective, seeing life as systems comprised of interconnected networks, is therefore a key concept. Moreover, the major problems of our time are all interconnected.
